Just think: a saving of ten cents a day, the price of a cigar, or many other expenditures for inxuries or frivolities of a like amount, would pay for a complete set of the Encyclopedia in a short time. Then there would be something substantial saved and a storehouse of knowledge secured, with but little effort or sacrifice.

Placing Zell's Encylopedia in a family is equal to the erection of a University for a century. Indeed, an honorable work. Payments are very easy.
